TRICKS.

EDITOR'S BLURB by Joe Santulli

As you probably have realized by now, Digital Press doesn't print "codes" in its bi-monthly regular issues. We never wanted to be like the magazines. I mean, we all like these codes and everything, but what's the point of reprinting them? I think that mose people check out the codes, try them once or twice, then forget where they saw them and that's that. Well, we have our own system here.

One of my jobs as part of Team DP is to keep the best possible tools always at my fingertips. Since we always strive to complete the games we review and don't always have the time to explore the pitfalls of each and every level, we occasionally resort to cheating. Er, well, maybe not occasionally. It's more like usually. Since I am one of those types of people who lose the codes after making a mental not of where I saw them, I've been keeping this "cheater's compendium", if you will. A complete listing of every code I feel will really help the staff and myself with the games.

Codes aren't for everyone, but if you've purchased this issue, it must be for you. I'll tell you now that we didn't come up with these all by ourselves. I openly admit that 90% of these pages were lifted from magazines, books, online services, and phone calls to the experts. The other 10% are passwords that we've kept a record of over the years. We intentionally left out Game Genie and Pro Action Replay codes since you have to own one of these and not everyone does. We wanted THIS compilation to be for everyone. Hopefully someone smarter than I will put together a "master list" of Game Genie and Pro Action Replay codes. But I digress...

So whatcha got here is an at-your-fingertips, in-your-face, line-by-line code crashin' console bashin' source that you can keep near your game systems for emergencies or whenever you just have the urge to cheat. If you either find a code that doesn't work or have a good one that we've left out (remember, Digital Press covers ALL cartridge-based systems, so anything goes!), get in touch with us. Otherwise, get busy! There's a lot of material here for you to review!

End of transmission!
